 - Classical music
 - "Classical improvisation/variation": a reinterpretation of a classical piece by a 20th/21st century composer (e.g. Sorabji's Carmen Pastiche, Paganini Jazz), or the ACMA performer/ensemble's improvisation/modification of the original piece to fit their unique style.
 - Jazz/Crossover/Stage and Screen
 - World music
 - Original compositions
 - Music/ dance ensembles

3. If You'd Like To Audition

- If you intend to audition, please submit the following information no later than Saturday, July 20th, 2019:
 - Your audition category*:
 1. Chamber ensemble
 2. Solo performer

As a professional courtesy, please inform your ensemble partners if you intend to audition multiple times (either solo or with other groups).
 - Exact name of your musical work/composer
 - Names/e-mail addresses of all performers for your selection
 - Approximate performance time (in minutes)
 - Number of music stands (if required)
 - Page turner (if required)
- All solo/chamber concert performances must be 10 minutes or less in duration.
- The audition itself: all performers must be present for the audition, and perform approximately 60-90 seconds of any piece of music that demonstrates their general performance quality and ensemble dynamics.
- Memorization is not required for the audition or the concert(s). Performers may read from sheet music.
- For ensemble performances, we strongly suggest looking within ACMA for your ensemble partners. The annual Collaboration Exchange is a useful document containing ACMA members who are open to collaboration. This document is available upon request.
- If selected, performers are required to attend or perform in at least three ACMA-related events prior to the concert date. Events are located on the <https://www.nycclassical.com/schedule> page. Performers that do not comply with this requirement will be disqualified from the Carnegie concert(s).
- Every performer must purchase at least one ticket. Tickets for our event can be purchased via our concert ordering process, or via Carnegie Hall ticketing services.

4. Selection Criteria

Following the auditions, the ACMA judging panel will meet to review potential performances. The panel will use the following criteria to assist the evaluation process:

- Overall artistic value: How will your performance move and inspire several hundred paying attendees? Strive to design a performance that is passionate and clearly conveys a musical message to its audience.
 - Originality/diversity of repertoire: Please refrain from selecting very commonly known or predictable musical pieces. Rather, display creativity and imagination in your choices.
 - Ensemble dynamics: How does your ensemble perform together? Is there musical “chemistry” and good harmonic balance between all instruments/voices?
 - Stage presence: Can you perform confidently onstage without an excessive amount of stage fright? Are you a compelling performer?
 - Emotional Intelligence: Are you able to take direction and criticism well? Are you committed to ACMA’s vision, and a “drama free” team player?
- Initial concert repertoire and performer selection will be announced in the late-August 2019 timeframe.
 - The ACMA judging panel reserves the right to select a set of performances that it deems the best overall fit for the concert(s), based on audition performance, artistic value, piece selection and ensemble dynamics. It also reserves the right to add, modify or remove performers and/or piece selections from its concert programs at any time.
 - Initial selection does not guarantee performance on the day of the concert. Performers must prepare to ensure a high level of musical quality and artistic value and meet the requirements stated above. If performers are unable or unwilling to adhere to these or any concert guidelines, they will be removed from the program.

Frequently Asked Questions

If I performed in a previous Carnegie Hall concert, can I still audition?

Yes. Even if you have performed previously with us, you are welcome to audition.

Do I have to find my ensemble partners, or can ACMA assist me?

Most concert ensembles come together via networking at monthly recitals or word of mouth. However, ACMA will try to accommodate ensemble requests as much as possible. Also, please consult the Collaboration Exchange document, available via e-mail upon request.

How can you judge performers based on a 1.5 minute performance?

1.5 minutes is plenty of time to judge ensemble dynamics, stage presence and musical value. Choose your 1.5 minutes carefully, something that brings out the best in all you and your ensemble members.

Is there anything else that you expect of an ACMA Carnegie performer?

Yes. We expect a level of commitment to ACMA (as outlined above), and not just a “hit and run” approach. Our approach is to work hard but also have fun and enjoy the process of building a concert performance. We seek artists who are team players and are able to take instruction/constructive criticism with good cheer.

Do I have to be an advanced amateur to be selected for Carnegie?

Absolutely not! However, Carnegie Hall performance standards are quite high. If you are a less advanced amateur, try to collaborate with more seasoned musicians. Piece selection is also important; try to find a collaboration where all ensemble members (including you) are heard and contribute equally to the quality and success of the performance.

When do tickets go on sale?

ACMA will conduct an internal ordering process, usually 120 days prior to the concert date; the box office ticket sale should begin shortly after the conclusion of this process.

Can I select the location for my purchased tickets?

Yes, depending on number ordered and ticket availability.
